CRAFT AS ART

The Pacific States Craft Fair features work by Nancy Adams 8/12-14

Three hundred of the nation's outstanding craft artists, selected from 1,600 applicants by a jury of prominent experts, exhibit handmade pieces created from clay, glass, metal, wood, leather, fiber, paper and mixed media at the 13th annual Pacific States Craft Fair in Piers 2 and 3 at Fort Mason.

"There is an inner inspiration influencing today's craft artist, resulting in a movement away from purely functional crafts to more of an art form," according to Carol Sedestrom Ross, President of American Craft Enterprises, the event's sponsor. The distinctive works presented at the show range from original museum-quality works for the serious collector to personal adornments or uncommon yet functional items for the home.

This year, the fair includes textiles woven into sculpted figures, glass blown and cast into unusual shapes, handpainted tapestries, porcelain vessels finished with contemporary designs, and wood turned and chiseled into unique forms. The organization that became American Craft Enterprises has been producing exceptional juried craft fairs for 24 years, having grown out of a grass-roots volunteer movement of artists not only exhibiting and selling their work, but also producing the show. Beginning with a small craft fair in Stowe, Vermont, in the mid-sixties, the shows evolved to nationally-acclaimed events in four major cities, with the Pacific States show alone drawing more than 27,000 visitors in 1987. These are the only craft fairs produced that are open both to the trade and public.

This year's show also features The Emerging Talent Showcase, nine graduate art students representing San Jose State University's Art Department, and nine students from the University of Washington. Space for this exhibit has been donated by the American Craft Council.

The Pacific States Craft Fair is open to the public Friday, August 12 from 11am to 8pm; Saturday, August 13 from 11am to 6pm; and Sunday, August 14 from 11am to 5pm. Admission is $5 for adults, with children under 12 free. Catered food will be available for sale. Parking at Crissy Field is free, with shuttle buses to the piers. Wednesday and Thursday, August 10 and 11, admission is reserved for the trade only. Wholesale buyers may request advance registration information by phoning A.C.E. at (800) 527-3844; for more information about the fair, call (415) 896-5060.

OUTSIDER ART: NOT SO NAIVE

The San Francisco Craft and Folk Art Museum presents an unusual show this summer. "Not So Naive: Bay Area Artists and Outsider Art" explores the connection between inspiration and creation, the conscious and the unconscious.

What, exactly, is "outsider art"? It is works of art by people without artistic training, who may not even think of themselves as artists. The houses Grandma Prisbrey built from bottles, the shaped containers made by convicts from folded cigarette packs, the patterned drawings of schizophrenic Martin Ramirez—all are examples, where the urge to create is so strong that it leads someone to make use of whatever skills and materials they have. Often, necessity spurs them to great invention and originality.

Outsiders added a distinctive flavor to Bay Area art. Especially in the 1960's and 1970's, the West Coast creative community needed the energy from a maverick element to encourage resistance to the pressures of the East Coast mainstream. From Bruce Conner's powerful assemblages to the raucous tin cutouts of Mark Bulwinkle, there are many revealing comparisons of style and content. "Not So Naive" is the first exhibition to examine this important influence.

In conjunction with the exhibition, the Museum presents a fascinating evening of film and video.

Grandma's Bottle Village is an award-winning color documentary by Allie Light and Irving Saraf depicting the legacy of Grandma Tressa Prisbrey. While in her 60's, Grandma began building a complex village of houses and structures from concrete and over a million bottles which she collected from the Santa Susana town dump. The interiors are a fairy-tale world fashioned of improbable materials, found and assembled with a rare sensitivity and wit. They include a wing of "the Cleopatra bedroom" dedicated to Chinese objects discarded from boudoirs, and a pencil collection numbering over 17,000 objects. In the film, Grandma Prisbrey gives a guided tour of her village.

An example of outsider art at the SF Craft and Folk Art Museum Artist: Richard Shaw

Watts Flowers is a black and white film made by a UCLA student in the early 1950's. This kaleidoscopic collection of sounds and images is the earliest movie ever made of Watts Towers in East Los Angeles, and includes rare footage of Sam Rodia at work on the towers. Rodia, a tile setter and construction worker by trade, began building his lacey cement and mosaic structures in the early 1920's, continuing until 1954, when he abandoned the project.

Howard Finster Man of Vision is a video produced by John Turner, co-curator of the exhibition. It is a portrait of Howard Finster, an extremely prolific artist. Finster produced over 7,800 works in twelve years, including outdoor construction assemblages and numerous paintings, one of which appeared as the cover of the Talking Heads album, Little Creatures. The video documents the opening of Finster's one-man exhibition, and includes vignettes of him singing and telling stories.

The Folk Art Film and Video Festival takes place on Wednesday, August 10 at 7:30pm. Admission is $5. The exhibition, "Not So Naive," opened July 2 and continues through August 28 at the San Francisco Craft and Folk Art Museum in Building A. For more information, call 775-0990.

CIRCUS IN THE PARKS

Traditionally, when the circus comes to town, it sets up the big top, offers a few afternoons of marvels, then disappears until next year. The Bay Area is fortunate to have a unique performing troupe, offering year-round entertainment, that makes Fort Mason Center its home.

Now in its fifteenth season, Make*A*Circus is San Francisco's only free-in-the-parks circus theater. This professional multi-ethnic group presents theme-oriented productions, combining elements of traditional circus entertainment, classical theater, and new vaudeville. The result is performances that are enjoyed by audiences of all ages and cultures. In addition to Clown Therapy and Teen Apprenticeship programs, last winter Make*A*Circus offered their first indoor production, the acclaimed Little Nemo in Slumberland.

But it is the summer touring show that is best known, reaching thousands throughout California. All the universally-loved elements are here: clowns, jugglers, unicycle riders, stilt walkers, acrobats, aerialists, and a five-piece jazz band. But Make*A*Circus' goal is not to impress audiences with the difficulty or danger of stunts, but rather to involve them in the thrill of participating in the creation of their own circus.

This season's show is Quiet on the Set, a story about the glamour and excitement of movie-making during the silent-film era of the 1920's.

The cast of Quiet on the Set performs in public parks around the city

It also features Mr. Squidly, a 25-foot giant purple squid who wreaks havoc among cast and crew. This performance is followed by a circus skills workshop, with audience members taught by company members. Later, these skills are incorporated into the grand finale, the Kids' Show, with the audience becoming part of the cast. The Kids' Show this year continues the theme of movie-making with A Cast of Thousands, a story about the production of an epic film involving a "cast of thousands," depicted by the audience.

This participatory element is only one of the unique features of Make*A*Circus. The company travels to many areas throughout the state with under-served low-income urban populations. These performances are often the only theater experience that some of these audiences have had. Making theater accessible to a wide range of groups is a primary goal of Make*A*Circus.

This season's production of All Quiet on the Set was directed by Jeff Razz, known for his outstanding work with Vaudeville Nouveau. Jeff applies his expertise to a very funny script written by Peggy Ford, author of last year's Little Nemo.

Make*A*Circus will perform in over 50 different locations throughout California this summer. Admission is always free. For more information on the schedule, call 776-8477.
